In Björketorp, Blekinge, Sweden, three large stones are erected. On one of them a threatening inscription is made in Primitive Norse:

ᛁᚾᚼᚱᚢᚾᚼᛉᚼᚱᚼᚷᛖᚢ

In Torna Hällestad, Skåne, Sweden, three rune stones are set up in the wall of the church, all with normal Scandinavian runes. (But note the special dotted m-rune ᛘ instead of the normal ᛘ.) The longest inscription of the three reads as follows:

In England, now at the British Museum, the stone cross from Lancaster has the following runic inscription:

ᚷᛁᛒᛁᛞᚫᚦᚠᚩ
ᚱᚫᚳᚣᚾᛁᛒᚪᛚ
ᚦᚳᚢᚦᛒᛖᚱᛖ

In Hög, Härjedalen, Sweden, a stone has an inscription made with staveless runes:
